A delegation of ambassadors, allowed to visit the Americans being held hostage by Iranian students at the U.S. embassy in Teheran, reports yesterday that they found the prisoners in good health. Their visit was said to have lasted for more than one hour.

No breakthrough in Teheran crisis; diplomats visit 60 U.S. hostages

Despite n flurry of diplomatic activity, late last night there were still no signs of a breakthrough in tha stalemated Teheran crisis, Iranian students, holding 60 U.S. hostages at the occupied U.S. embassy in central Teheran, are demanding that the U.S. hand over to n 'war crimes tribunal" the deposed shah.

A representative of Pope John Paul II met with Ayatoliah Ruhollah Khomeini yestarday. Despite a Khomeini vow of silence on the embassy issue, the Iranian strongman issued a call to the spiritual leader of the Iranian students holding the embassy to allow Vatican ambassador. Msgr. Annibalo Bugnini, into the besieged building. But Iranian sources said no breakthrough could be expected "until at Isast Monday." Earlier in the day, students jeered and jostled the ambassadors of Algeria, France, Syria and Sweden, who were allowed into the building to see that the captors 'would never stain their hands by harming ths prisonsrs." The Swediah ambassador reported that the hostages, separated according to sex, "had suffered no significant injuries." The diplomats said they had had the opportunities to put "simple questions" to the hostages, but would add nothing to their statement, which was given to the Swiss Foreign Ministry. Khomeini's self-imposed solitude, broken to meet with Bugnini, was announced by Iran's Acting Foreign member of the ruling Islamic said that Khomeini did "not agree to meet any of the foreign personalities to discuss the seizure, but accepted Msgr. Bugnini because of his being a religious figure."

Another religious figure who appealed to Khomeini was the Dalai Lama, who asked Khomefni to release the ''innocents.'

for years." There was little likelihood that Washington would send the shah back to a certain death in Iran, even after the Iranian students holding the embassy brandished before reporters an alleged petition with 32 signatures of Amsrican hostagea, calling for the shah's return to Teheran in exchange for their

A State Department spokesman said that "even if the petition were authentic," they would not accept it. since it was taken under duress. Reports of the petition also noted that the English was grammatically incorrect, and therefore must have been drawn np by the Iranian students.

While the stalemate dragged on, special U.S. envoy Ramsey Clark walted out the weekend in Istanbul, receiving reports on the situation from Palestine Liberation Organization officials who have been in contact with the Iranians.

Despite a hint by PLO chief Yasser Arafat yesterday afternoon that a dozen of the hostages might be released 'aoon,' Iran was officially disclaiming associations were under way through PLO third-party channels. And Libya slammed the PLO effort, calling it a "shame." Other Moslems blacted the Teheran action. Egypti Anwar Sadat described Khomeini as a "lunatic." "This really shows bow disgraceful is this act from the side of that man Khomeini...exploiting Islam. This is not Islam at all. I am really infuriated because this is not ," Sadat told reporters.

Support for Shaka was yeeterday relayed to Nnblus city hall by eeveral West Bank dignitaries and institutione of various political stripes ranging from PLO sympathizers to conservatives usually affiliatied with Jordan.

The deportation of Shaka, or even his dismissal, is likely to trigger a period of unrest during which mllitary government officials may find themselves compelled to take over the operations of a number of municipalities.

New municipal elections in the Weet Bank were originally slated for next April. However, a decision on the vote was recently deferred due to the current negotiations between Israel and Egypt for granting autonomy to the West Bank and the Gaza Strip before that date.

By ANAN SAFADI

Post Mideast Affairs Editor Egypt is planning to put forward a number of compromise proposals on the projected autonomy for the West Bank and Gaza Strip in an attempt to break the deadlock in the negotiations with Israel over the issue, according to weekend reports from Cairo.

The reports did not disclose details, but the new proposals were understood to sideatep thorny Egyptian claims for the incorporation of East Jerusalem in the projected autonomy and for recognition of the administrative council's jurisdiction over the land of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Aithough they made it clear that they would side with Arab claims to sovereignty over the territories at the end of a transitional self-rule arrangement, the Egyptians were reported to have acquiesced in Israel's insistence that autonomy be applied at this stage to inhabitants rather than to territory.

Furthermore, the Egyptians were said to be dropping demands for the inclusion of East Jerusalem in the autonomy echeme. Instead, they are proposing that the Arab Inhabitants - who maintain the status of JordaIsrael — be given the right to par-ticipate in the election of the projected scif-rule administration in the West Bank.

The Egyptians recently abandoned their demand for holding the election to the sutonomoue council under international supervision — a meacure opposed vigorously by Israel on grounds that intervention in the poil by the Palestine Liheration Organization might not be sufficiently censored. Egypt's chicf autonomy negotiator. Premler Mustapha Khaili, and his Isrseil counterpart, Intertor Minister Yosef Burg, in a recent meeting with outgoing U.S. autonomy negotlator Rohert Strauss in London, sgreed that the self-rule vote be conducted under joint sponsorship combining Israeli civillan representatives and local Palestinian Arab delegates in

West Bank and Gaza scepticism over the autonomy talks has been sggrsvated lately by two developments; the withdrswal from the negotiations of U.S. presidentist Robert Strauss after having raised local Arab hopes — by tough talk — to steer the territories into a settlement; and the weekend threat by West Bank mayors to sever contacts with the Israel authorities by submitting collective resignstions in protest of the government decision to deport Nablus Mayor Bassam

Sharon's plsn is certain to be resisted strongly by Defence Minister Ezer Weizman and his deputy, Mordschal Zipori. In recent discussions, majority opinion in the cabinet seems to bave supported Weizman against Sharon, But ministers know that if Sharon leaves the cabinet room dissatisfied, his dissatisfaction will immediately be translated into intransigence on the part of Gush Emunim - and that could lead directly to violence and even bloodshed when Elion Moreh comes to be dismantied by the army.

It is chiefly to avoid that ugly prospect that Education Minister Zevulun Hammer has been working these past few days at bridging the gaps between Welzman and Sharon. As leader of the National Religious Party's "Young Guard," Hammer is still a respected figure among all but

Weizman-Gush meeting today on Eilon Moreh

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT Jerusalem Post Reporter

Gush Emunim leoders and Ellon Moreh settlers will meet with Defence Minister Ezer Weizman in Tel Aviv this afternoon to discuss their settlement's future.

But their reversal of an earlier decision not to see the minister does not mean they have changed their positions. They reiterated on Friday that they will not leave the hill they now occupy overlooking Nablus and said they will try to prevail upon Weizman to take steps to implement his plan to develop six towns in the West Bank.

Welzman's mandate from the Ministerial Defence Committee calls for trying to reach an agreement with the settlers on where they will move until a new site is ready. They must leave their present location by November 22 to comply with a ruling of the High Court of Justice.

Friday's decision to meet Weizman was taken by a joint forum of Gusb Emunim and Eilon Moreh leaders, by a majority of one, after a six-hour debate. It followed Prime Minister Menahem Begin's refusai to meet them and reports of Weizman's conciliatory attitude.

BINT JBEIL, Southern Lebanon. Lebanon'e moderate left, led by Druse chieftain Walid Jumblatt, has recently been dispatching its own militias to a nsighbouring UNcontrolled zone south of the Litani River, in an attempt to eject Palestine Liberation Organization forcee from the area, according to reporte reaching thie South Lebanese town.

The moderate Lebaneae left, which appears to have quictly broken away from an alliance with the PLO. is said to be aimed nt achieving one of two alternative targets. The first is to reach an accommodation with the semiindependent border enclave of renegada Lebaneso Army Maj. Sa'ad Haddad for a global settlement of the four-year-old Lebanese political strife. The second aim is to guarantee the institutionalization of a leftist-sponsorad "atatelet" in tha var-torn country, which as a result of the civil war has been virtually divided into six mini-states ruled (from south to north) by Haddad, the UN Interim Force In Lebanon, the PLO, the Syrians, Christian political parties, and in the northwest by an extremist Marxist alliance combining Lebanese leftists and radical Palestinian leftists.

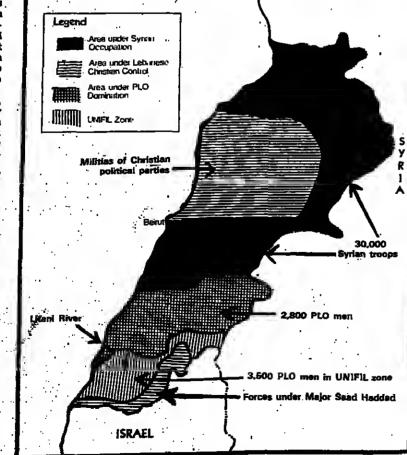

Junblatt'a moderate leftist grouping is currently contesting a neighbouring area in which some 3. 500 PLO men are manning about 40 strongholds scattered throughout a UN-controlled area south of the Litani. Their ultimate aim is to pread their begemony north of the Litzni in a zone in which about 2,800 PLO troops have been maintaining absolute rule.

Significantly, Junhlatt launched his drive for controlling the PLOsponsored areas in the Lehanese south after talks he held recently in Damascus and Amman with Syrian President Hafez Assad and Jordan's King Hussein. Jumblatt said last week that he would urge Arab leaders at an upcoming Tunisian stimmit later this month to press the PEO into freezing its Southern L'ébanese activity to pave way for accommodating a reconciliation between Lebanon's warring parties and a reunification of its breakaway governorates.

The general impression here is that Junblatt may find it difficult to evert what seems to be an imminent showdown with the PLO, which has gained more international recognition by maintaining a presence in Southern Lebanon than by its claim

Labour discord mounts over second Beit Berl

Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. - The second Beit Berl gathering last night, held in clear defiance of an appeal by party leaders to abstain from the factional meetings that they say have eaused a "free-for-all" in the party, has exacerhated internal friction in the Labour Party.

The party political hureau eecretariat last Thursday appealed to all factions and groups not to enter into a second round of gatherings and counter-gatherings which they say andanger party unity. The fac-tions were asked to postpone, for at least two weeks, what soms in the party leadership referred to as a 'free-for-all in which everyone is fighting averyone with everything." The hiatus was to have given party institutions a chance to deal with the potentially dangerous eituation hich has developed in the party.

Most of the groups have announced willingness to go along with the appeal, but the real test case was the gathering by the Beit Berl group last night. The party leadership fears this group more than any other because it includes many of the most prominent and powerful figures in the party. Among them are kibbutz movement leaders and heads of the most influential Histadrut financial and industrial concerns, including Bank Hapoalim's Ya'acov Levinson

The Best Berl group maintained over the weekend that the secretariat's call for a truce in factional meetings did not really apply to it hecause it is not involved in any perconal disputes and rivalries and the party secretariat's purpose was to check internal wrangling. But the assurance did not bave anything like a calming influence on the eamp of Shimon Peres, which argued that the Beit Berl gathering was the first volley in the new internal hattle in Labour. Had it not been held, the Peres camp believes, other groups could have been bald in check as well. The eccretariat'e appeal was primarily directed to the Belt Berl group, it was claimed.

The other groups in Labour which planned gatherings have expressed readiness to call them off, but the situation yesterday was still not entirely clear. The pro-Peres group, which bad echeduled a countermeeting to the Beit Berl gathering, announced that it would honour the secretariat's appeal.

The party doves, who had scheduled their second meeting for tonight, bave cancelled it, "although we are really not involved in any way in the personal conflicts of the party," they said in an announcemen

The party centrists and hawks, who said they would now launch a struggle to prevent erosion of the Labour Party platform, are not expected to act either until a move is made by the doves.

Yesterday's gathering was a larger version of the original, with about 150 people participating, including some development town mayors who were invited in an attempt to counter Peres camp charges that the group is "elitist in

U.S. presidential candidate claims he's pro-Israel Connally defends his M.E. policy

By WOLF BLITZER Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. - Key sides of Republican presidential candidate John Connally met with reporters at his campaign beadquarters here last week clearly eager to con-vines them that the former Texas governor'e controversial Middle East policy programme le actually Sam Hoskinson, a former Middle East intelligence officer in the Centrai Intelligence Agency, who resigned from Zbignisw Breezinski's National Security Council staff carlier this year to join the Connally campaign, was emphatic in insisting that a close reading of the entire epeech confirms this view. Hoskinson has been credited with having had the major input in drafting the epeecb, delivered hefore the Washington Press Club on October 11. As expected, he denied that, saying that it was a "team effort" with Connally himself having the final Connally's press secretary, James Brady, insisted that the governor has not written off the Jewish vote, either in the Republican primaries or in the general election next year. He expressed bope that American Jews and even Israei "ultimately" will recognize that Connally "is a friend of Israsl." Brady eald Connally was encouraged by the warm response he received earlier this month during a swing through Los Angeles and San Francisco, where a record $1.2m. was raised. He clatmed many Republican Jewish leaders on the West Coast attended $1,000 a plate dinners in those cities, although he refused to provide names.

What was most significant about the briefing was the clear impression that Connally and his advisers seem to have miscalculated the impact of the Middle East speech. They knew it would cause a stir, but they apparently did not anticipate such an emotionally-charged response.

Not that they are now conceding any specific shifts in the text of the carefully drafted epeceh. "We stand by every word," Brady said, in-sisting that the decision to issue a detailed position paper on the Middle East has proven to be "e net plus" in the campaign.
Julian Read, the campaign'e director of communications, echoed that assessment, noting pointedly that during the past four weeks (meaning since the speech), Connally has raised more money than ever before. That remark was designed to buttress the public position that the speech did not represent a political

But beneath this public posture, Connally and his aides recognize that they probably mishandled the public relations fallout from the speech Some of the damage could have been averted. Connally, for example, should have consulted with several key Republican Jewish leaders, such as Max Fisher, George Klein and Rita Hauser, in advance. That could bave alleviated some embarrassment and personal pique among theee Jewish activists, who learned about the speech only after it had besn sst in concrete.

At the hriefing, wblch was specifically called to elaborate on the Middle East speech, the aides suggested that the news media were largely responsible for the view that the speech was "anti-larael." Many of its points had been "distorted" in the initial reporting, they claimed. Regarding Connally'e eail for Palestinian self-determination, in-cluding the right to "an entirely inthen-foreign minister "didn't have the time." And more to the point, were quick to point out that Connally they charge that the embassy is in-terfering in domestic American politics — charges strongly denied by did not mention the PLO by name once during the speech. What the governor eald was only that the U.S. To hear the tone of Connally'e aldes today, one might conclude that Palestinian leadership a chance to talk, provided they are prepared to accept Resolution 242 and hence the

their candidate is really Israel'e best friend.
Moreover, if one were to take "the entire text" of the speech and "read it very carefully," one would realize that the speech was "pro-Iarael," ac-cording to the Connally aides. They refer specifically to the proposal for a joint Israeli-Palestinian development bank and a strong U.S. military presence in the Middle East. But the Connally aides say they realize that no matter how much thoughtful Israelis" might appreclate these positions, Prime Minister Menahem Begin and his cabinet probably will never come to like them because of their deter-mination to hold on to the West Bank and Gaza.

They believe that a Labour government in Israel might be more willing to accept the Connally positions as the best possible deal Israel could realistically expect.

In any case, the pro-Israel slant now being given by the Connally campaign to the speech tends to confirm that the American Jewish vote is still regarded as important in the domestic political process.

Hints of cabinet deal send NRP. Herut tempers soaring

Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Deputy Prime Minister Simha Ehrlich'e reported hints at National Religious Party gains from secret deals in the recent government reshuffle have sent political tempers soaring in the NRP, Liberal Party efforts over the weekend to smooth things over have so far been to no avail.

Ehrlich was reported by several of the participants at last Thursday's Liberal Party Executive session to bave intimated that the big winner in the recent government reshuffle was the NRP. He was quoted as telling his fellow Liberals that NRP gains "are not yet public knowledge; but when the facts are revealed, they will make us all hiush." As soon as the statements were published on Friday, a furore developed in the NRP and its leaders conducted Intensive contacte throughout the day. NRP secretarygeneral Danny Vermuss accused Ehrlich of "possibly wishing to sabotage the reshuffled cabinet and create an atmosphere which would prevent his successor in the Finance Ministry, Yigael Hurvitz, from

Reactions from the Liberal side were confusing. Ehrlich maintained that he had been quoted out of context, but be did not fully clarify what he meant to say. Sources close to him denied that he had aimed his barbs at the choice of Prof. Ya acov Ne'eman of the NRP as the Finance Ministry'e new director-general. Ehrlich said that, although he has some gripes about relations with the NRP, on the whole I am eatisfied with our Coalition partnership."

But NRP sources indicated yesterday that this would not be enough to calm the raging storm. "We still want to know what makes Ehrlich blush. If he knows of any deal to which we are supposed to be party, but which we know nothing about, he ought to make his information public and enlighten us," Vermuss said.

Ehrlich aleo snecceded in infuriating his Likud partners, especially Herut. Here too there is much speculation about what be meant by "secret deals" and Horut is furning over his assertions that the Liberals have 'become Herut'e whipping boy.

TEL AVIV STOCK MARKET REVIEW Bulls chase the bears away as bond market rebounds

By JOSEPH MORGENSTERN Post Finance Reporter

A major turnaround in the indexlinked bond market after a foreign currency cash "buying binge" of ncarly hysterical proportions, and then a sharp fall in the exchange rate of the Israel pound, plus a floundering share market, kept the Investment community hopping last week.

As the week began, the public sold Its Index-linked bonds as If they were hot potatoes, rather than an obligation guaranteed by the State of Israel, because of a beilef that once Ylgael Hurvitz assumed the office of finance minister he would impose a tax on the bonds. Only forceful support by the Bank of Israel left prices mainly unchanged.

Bui on Wednesday morning Hurvitz announced that there would be no tax imposed on index-linked bonde, nor would there be any change in foreign currency control regulations. Over the lasi two sessions of the week most bond groups added 5-6 per cent to their deflated prices as buyers flooded the market with orders. Record turnovers were achieved as more than ILib. worth of bonds were traded. Along the way a one-session, ail-time high of IL272.5m. was reached. The Israel pound siso devalued at a rapld rate early in the week as the public made a wild rush on ibe banks to convert pound holdings into cash of any foreign currency. Estimatca are that up to the equivalent of $20m. worth of cash was withdrawn from ihe banking sysiem. In some of the commercial banks foreign currency transactions were carried out on an allocation basis as stocks of cash

On Thursday the tide of devaiustion also changed direction, as the battered pound railied for a 10-agora gain. But the pound had been devalued by nearly 3 per cent in one week.

There was no change in the downward trend in the share market, with little incentive for the public to buy shares. Commercial bank shares were the only consistently good feature as their prices conjinued to rise in an attempt to maintain share galns in direct proportion to the rise in the cost-ofllving index. Real estale and land development, and investment company shares were badly battered by selling pressures and the prices of shares in these groups fell heavily.

Inspite of its simple construction, (the illustration is quite sufficient as do-it-yourself instruction) this Swiss lounge chair has an easily adjustable angle and even a built-in spring suspension. It can be arranged to form sociable circles or It can be set in remote spots. (So remote that you see only mountain peaks, glaclers and the azure vault of heaven.) And for a piece of furniture, it has a unique feature: moving it is not only no problem at all, it's pure delight.

Strapped to your feet it carries you on wide ski runs over gentle or steep slopes, it lets you float over bumps and even fly for a while if you wish. All this, over many kilometers of well-marked descents.

Far down in the valley other Swiss chairs await you: carved rustical chairs in cozy restaurants, stools in plush bars, fur covered benches in horse-drawn sleighs, deck chairs

This distinguished volume will certainly become the classic work on Jewish history, culture and religion

Tha Jews are one of tha great enigmas of history. What makes them unique? What has given them their resilianca, their power of survival and their ability to adapt to radically naw conditions without losing their identity? What combination of raligious faith, social organization, intellectual toughness and poetic imagination constitutes Jewishness?

The Jewish World approaches these questions in an antiraly novel way. Eighteen eminent authoritias survay Jewish history from its beginnings down te the 20th century. They discuss its 'outer' history — the days before the Exile. Jewish life after the destruction of the Jewieh stata under Christianity and Islam and the appearance of Zionism - and also its 'inner' history - the Bible, the Talmud. Jewish philosophy and Hebrew poatry. There is a lavish use of illustrations throughout all the sectione with a large proportion in colour - manuscript illuminations, liturgical objects of greet beauty, pictures and popular ert of all kinds.

Anti-Iran demonstrations in U.S.

WASHINGTON. — A wave of anti-Iranian feeling was sweeping the U.S. ever the weekend, with angry Americans in several cities clashing with Iranian students demenstreting euppert fer Ayatollah Ruhollah

In Los Angeles, some 160 demonetrators, mostly Iranians arrested for their ewn protection, were being held by police yesterday after police broke up a morning-long clash batween Iraniane and Americans angry about the situation in Teheran.

Among the counter-demonstrators was Irv Rubin, the national director of the Jawish Dafence League, who led the first assault of debriathrowing and name-calling at a group of Iranians demonstrating eupport for Teheran students who were holding the U.S. embassy in Teheran with 60 hostages.

Placards attacking "Zienism" were among those carried by the demonstrators, The signs, in large green and red letters, read "Zioniem racism, hypocrisy, expan-alonism," and "Jews eur hrothers, down with Zlonism.'

At different times during the ceurse of their demonstration, the demonstretors ehouted "Down with Zionism. "I've had enough of this nonsense

Economic proposals lauded in unanimous UN resolution

UNITED NATIONS (AP), - The UN General Assembly unanimouely adopted a Third World resolution on Friday expressing appreciation for acenemic preposals made hy national leaders that have epoken at lts current eession. Tha resolution referred to them as 'recent major proposala" on raw materials, energy, trade, development, money and finance made by heads of state or government and sald they constituted "an intarrelated, action-oriented and global approach" to those issues.

It specified that the Assembly's economic committee on the whols should include any "euggestions and recommendations ... which may result from the consideration" of those proposals in the report the committee is te make te a 1980 aconomic special seesion of the Assembly.

The resolution did not name any heads of state or government. But speakers that have made economic proposals to the assembly in the last lew months include President Jose Lopez Portillo of Mexico, President

Fidel Castro of Cuba and Chancellor Bruno Kreisky of Austria.

Lopez Portillo on September 27 predicted that the world would run out of oil in the next few decades and called for a world energy plan and world energy institute to conserve the remaining oil and smooth the transition to other energy sources.

Castro, chairman of the Non-Aligned Movement, called here on October 12 for governments to get up a $300b. fund to make gifts or loans to underdeveloped countries at a rate of at least $25b. a year for the building of houses, schools, hospitals and factories.

Kreisky urged that modern, industrialized countries, through large-scale joint action, build communication facilities, railroads and other basic systems for developing countries through something like the Marshall Plan.

The resolution in question was one of seven that the Assembly approved by general consent on the initiative of the developing countries' Group of 77, now 116 strong. Indian Am-bassador Brajesh Mishra introduced all seven resolutions.

MONTEVIDEO and SANTIAGO de CHILE.

THE SHOOTING of South Korea's President Park Chung-Hee has open-ed up a guif of uncertainty at a very delicate time, for the relations of all the major powers in East Asia are in the midst of difficult transitions.

Russia and China are flirting with reconciliation in the Moscow talks, yet also preparing for another proxy military confrontation in Vietnam. Japan's slide towards a virtual alliance with China has gathered speed rapidly over the past year, but is still less than conclusive.

The U.S. commitment to defend South Korea has also come into question since President Carter's election promise to withdraw all the U.S. ground troops there. During his visit to Seoul last June, he postponed any further withdrawals until 1981 after receiving new evidence of North Korean military expansion, but his quick two-step on the issue may have left lingering doubts about U.S. nation in North Korea.

Korea is one of the most important places in world strategy. The peninsula has land borders with the most heavily industrialized parts of China and the Soviet Far East at its northern end, while its southern end comes within 150 kilometres of Japan's main island. Half of all Asia's heavy industry is to be found within 750 kilometres of Kores, and its three neighbours contain about one-third of the world's population.

SOUTH KOREA AFTER PARK

This vital strategic position ex-plains why the Soviet Union and the U.S. set up rival regimes in their respective zones of influence after Korea was liberated from Japan in 1945, and why the continued striving of the 53 million Koreans for national reunification is so dangerous. North and South Korea are still technically at war, and despite the South's two-to-one population advantage, each side keeps about 600,000 men under

The two Korean armies rank sixth and seventh in the world in size, and the Communist North's big lead in tanks and combat aircraft is largely; counter-balanced by the $8,500 U.S. troops (equipped with tactical nuclear weapons) in South Kores. But political chaos in the South could create an irresistible temptation for the North to attack.

Tho last time the North tried to unify the country by military means, almost 30 years ago, it caused the biggest hot war of the Cold War era. North Korea's leader, Kim Il-Sung, is still there three decades later, more militant and megalomaniacal than aver. Moreover, be now bas a special reason for seising any opportunity that may present itself: it could be his last chance for a military victory. South Korea's economic miracle is rapidly opening a gap between the two halves of the country so wide that soon the North will be unable to afford to maintain its present level of military superiority over the South ---or even parity. Kim Il-Sung is growing old, and it is now or never. Neither Moscow nor Peking would approve of an attack on the South. but North Korea is nobody's satellite 80 WHAT are the prospects of South Korea descending into chaos in the coming weeks? Much greater than they would have been if President Park had died at any other time, for during the past six months Park's whole system of autocratic rule has been facing its greatest domestic challenge since 1971.

President Park was apparently shot because of a long-standing quarrel with his own intelligence chief over the need to ease up on domestic repression, rather than as part of some wider plot linked to the opposition or the North Koreans. By GWYNNE DYER / London

Park Chung-Ree

Novertheless, now that the strong man who has ruled South Korea for the past 18 years is gone, the opposition will push as hard as they can to break the existing system before its managers recover their balance.

A permanent successor to the presidency must be chosen within 90 days, and almost certainly he will be drawn from one of the rival factions that jostled for influence around Park. Leading "establishment" candidatos include former Primo Minister Kim Jong-Pil and the present martial law commander. General Chung Sung-Hua. But any successor from Park's entourage will face flerce recistance from the political opposition.

Labour turmoil in South Korea has been on the rise since the beginning of this year, etimulated by the govornment's strict measures to fight inflation which last year reached 30 per cent. After May 30, when the opposition New Democratic Party (NDP) chose the abrasive Kim Young-Sam as its new leader, the strikes and domonstrations took on an explicitly political character.

And since August 11, when hundreds of Park's riot police stormed the opposition party's headquarters in Secui to break up a protest moeting by women textile workers, killing one and sending 80 more to hospital, it has been all-out confrontation between the NDP and Park, In mid-October Kim Young-Sam was expelled from the National Assembly for "defiling" President Park, and all 69 opposition members resigned

By October 20, serious student riots bad caused Pusan, South Korea's second-largest city, to be placed under strict martial law. The demands for the repeal of the repressive Yushin ("Revitalising Reform") constitution of 1872 and the restoration of genuine democracy were mounting on every side, and the regime was clearly becoming worried. And then Park was killed.

With Park at their head, the military officers, technocrats and businessmen who have run South Korea's crash industrialization programme since 1861 could probably have ridden out the etorm. Without him, it is doubtful that they can continue to ignore the protests of those who have taken the orders and paid the cost of the "miracle."

South Korea is probably headed back to democracy. If the transition is too turbulent, however, it could also be headed back to war.

FOR THE newest Americans, the long process begins at Travis Air Force base, north of San Francisco. which has become a latter-day Ellis Island of the West. It is a chilly, comfortless spot, but for the exhausted, often sickly people who have paid in gold for the privilege of spending days in an open boat, never knowing whether they would survive, it is as one put it - "holy land."

Since the fall of South Vietnam in 1975, the U.S. has spent more than $1b. to adopt and settle some 230,000 refugees, ranging from well-healed allies, such as former Premier Nguyen Cao Ky (now the owner of a flourishing Los Angeles liquor store) to starving peasants who speak no word of English.

THE ORIGINAL plan was to deposit the newcomers in major cities around the country, but there was nothing to prevent them from moving to California. And they did, finding the climate more congenial and job opportunities greater among the state's long-established Asian com-

The high incidence of TB has caused Orange County - home of Disnoyland and ex-President Richard Nixon - to establish a $800,-000 clinic to handla the refugees' health needs. The area is one of tho few in the nation to experience an increase, instead of a decline, in TB. Now Orange County is formulating a Yot the antipathy, based largely on language and social misunderstandings, usually fades when people meet face to face, says Fass.

Perhaps a more sorious threat to the hopes of those waiting in the camps is posed by an unlikely coalition of pressure groups, right-wing oxtromists, liberal environmontalists, labour unions, and black and Chicano organizations, who, for different reasons, oppose the rising tide of immigration

Ad Hoc Committee for Settlement in the Land of Israel

A MESSAGE TO THE GOVERNMENT OF ISRAEL What is Israel's Policy on Settlements in Judea and Samaria?

- Declarations are contradicted by actions. Israel's friends are confused by equivocation.

- Israel needs settlements in Judea and Samaria.

Allow them to develop. Give them structures. Build homes and schools and public buildings. Fortify them with steel and brick and mortar.

Sow the land with deeds in place of promises.

ISRAEL'S ENEMIES AS WELL AS ISRAEL'S FRIENDS AGREE ON ONE AND ONLY ONE CONCEPT: STRONG, THRIVING AND SECURE JEWISH SETTLEMENTS

ARE THE ONLY DETERRENT TO ALL OTHER CLAIMS TO THE LAND OF ISRAEL

THE MESSAGE TO THE WORLD MUST BE CLEAR

Israel Must Build For Permanence — Physical, Political and Spiritual BACK THEM AND WE'LL BACK YOU

SIMHA DINITZ bad a problem some time ago: he was to play host to Elizabeth Taylor in his home and he needed urgently a lawn. Telling some friends the problem, one of them proposed that he call up the Nursery at Givat Brenner, where they might solve his problem. One telephone call solved his problem, and his house had a beautiful green lawn for Elizabeth Taylor. This is one of the Items in the Hisb-Gan Instant Gardening concept, a new venture by one of the country's veteran nurseries.

It was started 50 years ago as an agricultural branch, selling its produce. through Touva. Today, this nursery has such a good reputation that it sells all its products on

About 50 per cent of its output goes to the professional bodies, such as plant shops, professional gardeners and institutions, and the other 50 per cent to private persons.

Ruthy Agmon, the nursery's manager told The Jerusalem Post that the instant gardening concept is intended for the busy person who wants a garden but doesn't have time to do the

For instance, someone wanting a lawn comes to the nursery and can choose today from three types of lawns: Bermuda type called Santa Anna, or what the Israelis wrongly call buffalo grass, the St. Augustine, and a new type soon going on sale, Zoysia.

Buying instant lawn is rather like buying a rug: you first choose the kind you want. It is then cut for you, either in squares or in long strips which are rolled up like carpet. You take it home, lay it down where you want the lawn to be, give it a good watering, and there you have a green lawn. The price at the time of writing, was IL35 per square metre.

The Santa Anna type of grass comes originally from California, is smog resistant, and can be trampled on, cars can even ride on it. The nursery plans to sell it to sports stadiums too. Its main weakness is that it does not grow in the shade.

The St. Augustine grass is suitable for shady places, and is available also in a dwarf yersion, which means the owner has to mow it

The Zoysia type is being developed now. Its advantage is that it grows very slowly. Because of this. (N.B., all you lazy gardeners), it needs to be moved only once every five years! But because it takes much longer to grow and prepare for the customer, its price will be at least 50 per cent blgher than other instant grasses.

After fast food, fast gardening is the new concept. Yitzhak Oked visit Givat Brenner's nursery, where greenery is a growing industry.

Also in the development stage are a number of wild Israeli plants and flowers, which they are trying to turn into household plants. Ruthy Agmon fears that the nursery will have a bard time persuading Israslis to switch to these plants, because the average Israell plantlover. today is what she terms "European orientated," in his tastes.

She has been working in the borticulturel field for 10 years, and claims that there has been a mini revolution during that time as more and more Israelis have begun taking an interest in flowers and plants.

Ruthy says that the city plant growers are always looking for tall trees or plants so that they won't have to see their neighbours. Those that live in penthouses are looking for strong plants that can withstand heavy winds, freez ing weather, and broiling sun.

The moshavniks usually buy in greater quantities, and unlike city dwellers, they do not like very tall plants - they are more sociable and like to see their neighbours."

The kibbutzniks have a much easier life the majority of them have a kitbutz gardener who helps them to plan the landscape next to the house, but recently more and more kibbutzniks have become interested in garden-

The Arab sector has also started showing an interest. They like their flowers and plants to be of striking colours and with strong smells. Jasmine is very popular with them. They favour fruit trees over ornamental trees, that do not give fruit.

In general, her clients come to the nursery knowing exactly what they want, probably because they have seen something they want at a friend's or a neighbour's house. The nursery gives all its clients information on how to replant the plants they buy, and what treatment to give. They are also preparing written instructions in Hebrew for each tope of Rates are fixed according to the nursery association, and because of this their prices are relatively higher than the smaller nurseries that are not members.

Green

By Diana Lemer.

THEIR garden nursery in B'nai Zion near Ranaana tells the story of two elderly people, green thumbs on each Hand, who in their old age had the daring to start a business out of a hobby — and are making a go of it. The couple, Asher and Dagmar Hand, opened their enterprise two years ago when Asher, an agronomist, was retired from the Ministry of Agriculture. A semiinvalid, he had been working in soil facility there since a disabling accident forced him out of private prac-

Today, his wide range of house plants and trees spread out in a corner of his 25-dunam orchard attracts regular customers, who often come ust to wander around as if in a botanical garden, and constantly discover new treasures there. Organically grown as close to nature as possible, their plants can easily be cared for at home. Dagmar told me. "It started more out of boredom than anything else," Asher main-

Dig for Victory

of spending the time is gardening.
As a child, I early developed the technique of reducing those around me to nervous wrecks while remaining perfectly cool myself. Wise adults, in whose charge I was placed for my family's good, put me out to gardening. They gave me a plot about a metre and a half square, to sow with radishes, a strawberry plant, and a group of bluebells. When one strawberry grew I triumphantly ate it along with sugar and the top of

Gardening is the perfect way of spending time for any child. Liberty to get dirty just adds to the fun. Results can be seen soon — and can often be eaten. Gardening is never Kibbutz and farm children have these delights ready to hand. Children in town have nothing but the gardens of apartment blocks. Those in the concrete jungles of the slums grow up scarcely knowing how a plant germinates or that fruit comes off a tree. It is surprising how little our city children know of natural life.

It might be an idea to learn about "the birds and the bees" from the creatures themselves, not from textbooks. Call a spade a spade - and put that spade in your kid's hand and let him dig away his complexes and

Not that I am certain that gardening will automatically rid us of delinquency, drug addiction and prostitution... but Israel's leaders have not yet thought up a better cure. Until they do, as the British used to say — "Dig for Victory!"

Hortidecor

Greer Fay Cashman learns about indoor gardening. Photos: Dan Landau.

YOU MAY not find hortidecor in your dictionary, but you will find it in your environment. It's growing rapidly all around you, but it's one of those things of which you remain unaware unless you confront it head on. Hortidecor is a specialised professlon which is just coming into its own in Israel. In case you haven't guessed, hortidecor is the art of planned indoor gardening. (Hortus is Latin for garden).

There was a time when people with enough money to pay for the privilege, used to call in an interior decorator to reflect their personalities in their homes. These days, the interior decorator takes care of the furniture and furnishings. but the choice and arrangement of plants is left to the hortidecorator.

Some people who've bean tending their own begonias, cacti, boxwood and other house plants for years, may sneer at the thought of calling in a specialist, but there are planty of others who've begun to realize that they can't explore the aesthetic potential of Indoor plant life alone. Many have only recently been hitten by the plant bug.

Among the specialists who help them to develop a feeling for indoor plants is a laughing-eyed, blonde Jerusalemite by the name of Yael Komhor. A former nurse who turned hobby into a profession, Yael has been enamoured with plants since she was a small child. That love flourished a little more each year when Yael's parents used to pack her off to relatives in Haifa during school vacations. "Like all good yakkes," Yael recalled, "they had a pot plant in every corner, I was fascinated by the different blooms, and I was so eager to learn everything that I could about them, that I devoured all the plant literature I could find in Hehrew, English and German."

When she was working as a nursa she brought her plants with her, and tended tham as lovingly as she tended her patients.

On a visit to New Orleans two years ago, Yael discovered plant decor. "What I saw in public huildings and private homes was just unhelievable," she says. "There were so many beautiful and exotic plants displayed in so many attractive ways, that I knew that I couldn't leave New Orleans until I had grasped the concept and could hring it hack to Israel."

She apprenticed herself to a New Orleans horticultural establishment. "In New Orleans, you can't get a licence to operate that kind of vanfure, unless you can prove that you really know what you're doing. For me, it was the hest education

Back home, without any plans to maka professional use of ber talents. she was talking one day to Jerusalem jeweller Michael Ende who told her that if she bad a creative gift, sha shouldn't waste it. Still unsure of Herself, Yael was hesitant. Then Ende asked har to rearrange his show-cases at the King David Hotel, and shortly afterwards, when be opened a restaurant across the road from the botel, he asked Yael to take charge of the plant decor. Encouraged, Yael accepted a commission from a travel agency. Then the hotel industry discovered her - the Dan Hotel in Tel Aviv, the Moriah hotsis in Jerusalem and the Dead Sea, and the Capital's Plaza and Kings hotels. It didn't take long before apartment and villa dwellers also hegan asking her help.

She doesn't run her husiness in the conventional sense of the word. "If I'd wanted to simply sell pot plants across the counter," she said, "I would have opened a shop. My alm is to persuade people that indoor plants are as integral as furniture."

A visit to her Ba'aka, Jerusalem home illustrates the point. Yael receives guests in the attractive glassed-in portico beyond the arbour of her outdoor garden. Most of the wall-space and some of the celling are laken up hy exotic iropical plants. The effect is soothing, attractive and uncommercial. There is nothing to suggest that any of lhese Items are for sale.

Yael pours coffee and allows the visitor to relax amid lhe tropicana. "I can usually tell when a person comes to see me what sort of plants he or she likes," she claims. "I try lo imagine what sort of houses they live in, and when I eventually gel there, I find that there isn't too much of a gap hetwean my imagination and

From a general viewpoint, men prefer trea plants, while women go in for creeping, small-leaved

People buying plants for the first time worry about how much effort is involved in maintaining them. Different plants have different needs, just like people. Yael helieves in people-plant communication. When potential clients start talking aboul what a burden ll must be to look after so many species. Yael worrles about "how the plants must be feeling." She asserts that if one has enough time to eat or to watch television, one has enough time to care for a plant as well.

Her son Elon, 74, has become eo attached to several plants "that he spolls business for me." A client who expresees interest in one of Elon'e favouritee, ie firmly told by the little boy. "you can't have that one, it belongs to the house."

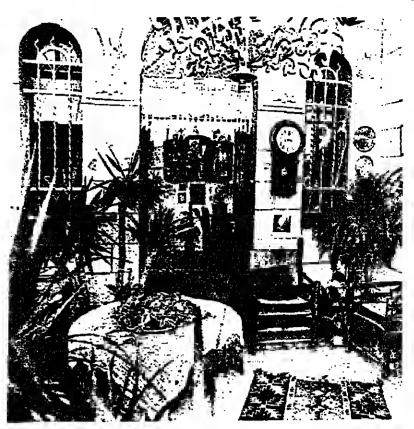

Yael buys plants from Holland, the garden bourse of the world. She travels to Holland two or three times a year to acquaint herself with a wider variety of plants and to learn more about their care.

All the plants which she buys abroad arrive in Israel in peak condition, but after a short period in people's homes, may start to develop yellow spots on the leaves. "That'e no cause for concern," Yacl assures distraught clients. "The plant is merely in shock aggravated by the change of water. In Holland, it has been nourished by purified water. In Israel, there is such a high mineral Content in the water, that it takee the plant several weeks to acclimatise." Yael visits all the plants after installing them in the new homee. "I want to make sure that they're being properly treated." she told me. "Israelis tend to put all plants as close to the sun as poselble. Direct sun is not good for plants, and there are certain plants which suffer badly when exposed to sunlight. It's also important to keep plants within their own families."

Yael deplored the fact lhat so many florists sell mixed tubs of cuttings of plants which have no relationship to each other. The combined arrangemen might look lovely in the shop," she contended, "hut if you've got four or five verletics, one of which needs a lot of water, one of which needs minimum moisture, one of which thrives in lhe sun and one of which must be kept oul of the sun, al least two of the plants will die very quickly."

Yael's dream is to open a nursery with a coffee-house on the premises. "To really appreclate plants," she explained, "people have to he aware of their scope. I want to decorate the coffee shop with fully grown plants, so that anyone whu doesn't know very much about them can have an indication of what to expect when they huy a plantiet.'

plants, and beliave plants have thoughts and feelings of their own. Others would rather let them grow us Mother Nature Intended them to. with a little water and lots of light and leave talking to peopla, they say.

At the Kacholi Plant Nursary in Yokne'am, a development town about 15 km. from Haifa, the recipe includes both. Scores of thousands of plants and shrubs of all possibla shapes and colours are kept in the huge greenhouses under computercontrolled heat, light and humidity. Little happens outside that affects them Insida. But Ze'ev Kacholi knows them all, and he can tell when a particular plant blossoms and when it breeds, where it came from and what kind of customer will probably buy it. He is also the only one who knows how many drops of waler are needed to keep aach and every one of his plants aliva.

'After a lifetime with plants, I still don't know if they can think. But I can tell of very strange things that have happened. Countiass times people have bought from here tha most gorgeous plants, in full hlossom, and were back two or threa weaks later looking vary sorry. 'Zevi,' they tell me, 'my plant seems as though it has lost its will to live.' I take it back for.

a period of 'recovery' — usually 15 days - and then return it to lhe owner, who can barely recognize his plant, by then fully restored to its original splendour."

What happened? Ze'ev maintains he still hes not the faintest idea. In many cases, ha said, owners confess to having left the plants in a corner. barely setting eyes on them again. Watering and care are usually left to the children and maid who have little - if any -- knowledge of how, when and where to do it. At the Kacholl nursery, that does not happen, he added. Each and every plant gets peraonal, undivided attention at least once a day. My brother and I work from dawn to dusk to keep it like that, but It's worth every mo-

"House plants are the blg fashlon now," Kacholi went on, "and there are nurscries and plant shops all over the place. People buy plants in quantities, not one or two any more, and they want lo learn more about it. The reason, I believe, is that living in larger housing complexes, they lose contact with greenery and they miss Furthermore, plants are a chcap way to fill a room (instead of conventional furniture) and they last longer than flowers now hacoming increasingly expensive. 'Plant care is wonderful occupational therapy. We know a number of bereaved families who got back thair interest In living things through plant care; of ulcers cured after people started taking an active interest in plants; of brain-damaged children who started smiling after they were taught the basics of plant care. It is the most relaxing hobby of them all."

Ze'ev Kacboli's almost unwrinkled face, haalthy tan and constant emile help prove his point. He joined the nursery his hrother Yosef huilt during the War of Independence days on the road to Yokne'am. At first they tried their hand with fruit trees and difficult.

"People thought that the soll near because II is dark and heavy. In fact the earth has proved too heavy, and the climate too humid as it rains too much here. It is difficult to grow anything which requiree controlled almosphere conditions. So we turned to house plants."

Tha Kacholi Nursery is the largest in the North and among the best known in the country. Its five greenhouses spread over five dunams. On Saturdays, people sometimes have to wait for three or four hours for their turn to enter the greenhouses and choose their plants. Instead of having a showroom as everybody else, I made alleys all along the houses, to let the people walk in and see for themselves how we keep the plants," Kocboll ex-

They also provide shoppers with a leaflet of instructions on plant care: People want to know more. They ask a lot of questions and usually listen attentively. If you wan! your house plants to look like showroom samples, you have to put in a lot of

TA Mac upset: Netanya leads race

TEL AVIV. — Tel Aviv Shimshon brought off a shock 2-1, away win over champion Tel Aviv Maccabi at Bloomfield Stadium yesterday, dropping last week's leader to 6th place in the National League. Netanya Maccahi is the new Jeader, following a 2-0 away win over nickless Haifa Hapoel. But four feams are level on points at the top of the table, and two more are only one point hehind. Netanya Maecabi leads Tel Aviv Hapoel, Shimshon and Yehud Hapoel on goal average. Tel Aviv Hapoel beat bottom-placed Jaffa Maccabi by 1-0 at the Jatter's ground, while Yehud Hapoel beat Buel Yehuda by the same score et home. Kfar Sava Hapoel held Jerusalem Betar to a 1-1 draw at the YMCA stadium in the capital. · But the win of the day was notched by Beersheba Hapoel, a 4-0 victor over Petah Tikva Maccabi in the k Negev capital. It was Beersheba "Hapoel's first win of the season, leaving only Jaffa Maccabi and Haifa Hapoel with no wins in seven league games. Ramat Gan Hakoah returned to winning ways by beating Tel Aviv Betar 2-1 in Givatayim; but Ramat Gan's other first division club. Ramat Amidar, lost 0-1 away to Petah Tikva Hapoel.

of the season, after nine games, beating Tiberias Hapoel 1-0. Risbon Lezion Hapoel scored a 4-0 win over Belt Shemesh Hapoel.

Shimehon opened the game against Tel Aviv Maccahi with great keenness, which tested the home defence, playing without Avi Yerushalmi, Gideon Damti's penetrating runs were particularly troublesome, and it was he who gave Shimshon the lead in the 40th minute.

Early in the second half Shimshon led 2-0 after Damti heat three players before being brought down by defender Meir Nimni. David Shukiyan made no mistake from the penalty spot.

Only then did Maccabi start to fight back, and in fact controlled the second balf. In the 59th minnte, Benny Tabak pulled back a goal after Vicky Peretz's shot was pushed out by goalkeeper Yitzhak Balaish. But further Maccabl attacks were repulsed by a tightened Shimshon

Beersheba was in a festive mood last night, as Beersheba Hapoel could have won its game by double the number of goals scored. All four goals were netted in the first half, and the Negev side was unrecognizable from its earlier games this season. Particularly impressive was the new Beersheba talent in teenager Eli Weizman. In the 6th minute, he opened the seoring. Ya'acov Cohen netted the second goal with a fine shot, and Shalom Avitan added two goals in the 38th and 44th minntes. In the second half. Avitan missed with a penalty and Meir Barad hit the Petah Tikva posts three times.

Petah Tikva Maccabi played kcenly and in sporting spirit, making the Becraheha trinmph even more resounding.

In Kiryat Haim before 6,000 Netanya Maccabi took the lead after 12 minutes when Benny Lamm beat goalkeeper Benny Weinberg directly from a corner kick. Haifa Hapoel controlled the midfield for most of the game, hnt hadly lacked a sharpshooter in front of goal. Its most dangerous striker, Shalom Schwartz did not play yesterday.

Oded Machness clinched the result in a breakaway Netanya attack in the 72nd minute.

Another team which had the edge but came out a loser was Jaffa Mac-cabi, which produced its best football this season. Eli Schechter missed from the penalty spot in the last minute of the first half, when goalie Arye Bejerano saved his shot. Jaffa Maccahi also had five glorious scor-ing chances, but failed to net any of

Tel Aviv Hapoel scored its winner in the 55th minute with an 18-metres free kick by Rifat Turk. Turk has become the dynamo of Tel Aviv Hapoel, and David Poliakoff was best in midfield. But the star of this match was Bejerano.

Yisrael Sasson scored Yehud Happel's winner in the 53rd minute. A shot from 80 metres out by Efraim Yaish put Hakoah into the lead against Tel Aviv Betar in the 12th minute. Hakoah did most of the attacking, hut Mosbe Romano levelied for Betar in the 35th minute after Hakoah'a goalle Shaul Ben-David failed to collect e simple shot. In the second half, Moshe Yehiel was brought on, though he earlier claimed to be injured, and it was he who scored Hakoah's winner seven minutes before the end.

Yisrael Vogel put Riar Save Hapoel ahead in Jerusalem in the 22nd minute. Eli Mialy put Betar level in the 35th minute, with a sbot that Avi Sasson should have saved. Betar, without Malmillian, was again far from at its best.

Par for the course as Egyptian golfers avoid Israelis

ATHENS (Itim). - A last-minute schedule change prevented what would have been the first-ever competition between Israeli and Egyptian athletes here yesterday.

The official reason for changing the two countries' partners in the second round of the World Cup golf tournament here was that an error had been made in calculating earlier results, which are used to set up later matches. But the real reason was apparently fears by the Egyptian players that the proposed partnerable might glva them problems at home.

Instead, Israel played Singapore and Egypt faced Switzerland. After yesterday's third round of the tournament, the U.S. team of Hale Irwin and John Mahaffey held a five-stroke lead over Taiwan, 434 to 489. Scotland was third with 440.

Israel'a Neil Shochet and Laurie

Japan disinvites Israel from karate tournament By JACK LEON Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The long-standing invitation to the Israel Karate Federation to take part in this month's second world full-contact karate championships in Tokyo has been withdrawn because of Arab pressure on the Japanese organizing committee.

The IKF has therefore been forced to cancel its plans for a six-man team of black belt fighters to leave next Saturday for the 74-nation meet, federation prealdent Dennie Hanover told The Jerusalem Post yesterday. The Israelis have spent the past year training five times e week for the championships, which take place in Tokyo from November 28 to 25.

The Foreign Ministry has been informed of the situation and is making atrong protests to the organizing committee through Israel's embassy in the Jepanese capital, Hanover reported.

Cancelletion of the two-year-old invitation came last week in a letter to the IKF from Mas Oyami, president of the Kyokushinkikan Internationei Karate Association and chairman of the organizing committee. Oyami wrote: "I am under very bard pressure from various overseas and Japanese groups regarding Israei'a participation in the cham-pionshipa. Much as I wanted Israel to compete, I am now forced to admit that if Israel takes part, the tournament will be destroyed. So I request you not to come this time, to save the tournament." Hanover asid that "quite obvlousiv Oyami was referring to Arab pressure." The IKF head pointed out that the organizing committee's president is Jordan's King Hussein, and Prince Mohammed is its "honorary sdviser."

The federation had until now enjoyed close cooperation with the committee, which was to have paid the team's air fare from Europe to Japan, as well as accommodation and touring there. The Israelis were to have paid all other expenses out of their own pockets.

The aquad, all sabras, comprised Shmuel Berner (captain), Yoram

Yehezkei, Yoram Cohen, Boez Aviram and Mickey Erez, with Johannesburg-born former South African judo champion Hanover as managar-coach. The IKF, set up in 1972, now has 15,000 affiliated members. It joined the World Unioo of Karate

Organizations three years later. In 1977, an Israeli team was ousted from the second International Karate Amateur Federation championships in Tokyo, after they had been invited by the organizers and gone to Japan at their own expense. "Security problems" were, as usual. given for Israel's expulsion.

Israel Olympic Committee president Yitzhak Ofek yesterday charged Japan as being "the world's worst offender when it comes to giving in to Arab preesure against the legitimate participation of Israeli athletes in sports gatherings.

During the past two years or so, the Japanese have refused to invite Israel to major international competitions in soccer, athletics and weightilfting, for what they called "security reasons." But Ofek said that "political and not security considerations are the real reasons for Japan's actions."

Meanwhile, a Palestinian team last week took part in the Asian handball championships in Tokyo, the first time that the Palestinians have been represented in an official Asian championship event in any sport. Ofek stated that the teams of so-called Palestinians, now par-ticipating increasingly in international sport, are usually Kuwaiti citizens of Palestinian origin. (By coincidence, in the handball mcet, Kuwalt defeated Paiestine in a playoff for third place.) Israel is a member of the European handbali grouping, and so was not involved in the Asian championships.

To compensate the disappointed laraeli team membera, Hanover reported, the IKF has accepted an invitation to send the same fighters to the U.S. shortly as guests of the New York-based World Jewish Karate Federation. The Israelis will spend three weeks in America, competing against both Jewish and non-Jewish teams.

Humiliating America

NOT LONG before he stepped down as premier last week, taking his entire cabinet with him. Mehdl Bazargan acknowledged in an interview that ultimate power in Iran rested with the Moslem clergy, under the direction of Ayatollah Khomeini. He described Khomeini as a 'rough and primitive man."

though also "a genius." That just about summed up the current situation in Iran. It also explained in advance why the Teberan government had to pass on the reins of formal power to the one body that could be said to wield any real authority in the country, Khomeini's Revolutionary Council. That Khomeini is a "genius" may well be granted, certainly regarding his capacity to manipulate crowds of rough and primitive men like himself.

For several decades these men land women, although they count for rather less) found themaelves being dragged, kicking and screaming, from the depths of the Middle Ages right into the Modern Age. Now they are striking back, or so they think, at the man wbo did it to them.

The Shah's sins have been many and scarlet, including massive unjust enrichment. But worse than any, in the eyes of his countrymen (those among them, in any case, who are now in controli has been his effort to remake Iran into a modern, industrial, secular state.

To prevent him from staging a comeback through bia (fake, they truly believe) hospital room in New York, they think nothing of violating the most elementary norms of international conduct. They just want the Shah back, safely dead in their own hands.

In this they have the full blessing of the Ayatollah from Qom. The seemingly unruly student mob that took over the U.S. embassy in Teheran was in fact an arm of the revolutionary council. Its action was not a passing whim, but an expression of calculated policy. And the policy is also to rub American noses in the dirt. for witbout the Americans, it is thought, the Pahlavi dynasty would long ago have vanished into thin air.

Facing a state ruled not by a responsible government but by rampant madness, America is inevitably in a quandary. The primary concern is of course the safety of the three score U.S. hostagee. Their reacue by means of an Entebbe-type operation is clearly out of the question.

The good old days are over when the U.S. could secure the release of an American citizen jailed by a Barbary brigand chief, by just waving the threat of force. Americans know this, which is why criticism of President Carter's handling of the situation has eo far been fairly mute.

Republican precidential aspirant John Connally, it is true, putting aside for the moment his counsel of surrender to the oll potentates, spoke bravely of no surrender. In the long run, of course, America's ealvation lies in freeing itself from energy dependence upon such countries as Iran.

Until the hostages are released, any reprisals are likely to hurt the U.S. more than Iran. Newly announced presidential candidate Edward Kennedy was careful to counsel none in Boston the other day.

What the U.S. can do at this moment is to try to keep its dignity by bringing various forms of diplomatic pressure to bear on Khomeini. The UN, the Vatican and European envoys have been marshalled for this purpose. There is no surer way for America to lose honour than to allow the hypocrite friend of Ayatollah Khomeini, PLO chief Arafat, to "mediate" the release of the hostages - and thus in one stroke obtain the legitimacy he has been hankering for. Then nothing it would do, after this crisis has passed, could restore the national honour.

THE GATHERING CRISIS

The really tough part of the autonomy talks is yet to come,

IN A LECTURE delivered a fortnight ago under the auspices of the Middle East department of the University of Pennsylvania, the Egyptian Ambassador to the U.S. expressed some interesting ideas about the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty.

Bearing in mind that professional diplomats in general, and those who represent totalitarian regimee euch as Egypt in particular, do not indulge in personal speculations, the Egyptian ambaseador's views carry special weight.

The ambassador told his eudience that President Sadat ie now following a rather mild policy towards Israe as far as a settlement in the West Bank is concerned. Sadat, be said, is waiting for January 1980, when tha Egyptian Army will be in full command of the stratsgic passes in Sinal, following their total avacuation by Israel. The Israel Defence Force remaining in the rest of Sinal will then be in an inferior etrategic situation, and at that point, be said. Sadat'e policy toward Israel, both in tone and in action, will become rigid.

Egypt will then press for an Arab-style settlement in the West Bank and will expect the full backing of tha

The fact that this forecast of the Egyptian strategy was uttered publicly (the amhassador must have assumed that his audience was not particularly sympathetic to Israel) is alarming but not surprising. The extremely mild reactions of the Egyp-tlans to the settlemant issue in Judaea and Samaria is very

Even from the point of view of the inter-Arab relations, one would expect the Egyptians to have made more noise about the Israeli settlemants in the territories. But the Egyptian Preeldent saems to be holding back his fire until he has most of the cards in his hands.

writes MOSHE SHARON. Meanwhile, every stage of the so-callad "normalization" of relatious planned to become invoived in the details of the settlament of the with Israel is dragged out and made Palestinian problem and be repeatedly eaid that this problem ininto a major issue. Beyond the precluding its territorial aspecis, eboald be discussed with the Jordanians and whom the Egyptians think they can win over, very few Israelis have been allowed into Egypt, and the passport control authorities at the Egyptian international airports showed no good will towarde a email group of Israelis who landed in Egypt without planned visits of certain Israelis,

From their side, only a few official and semi-official Egyptians have appeared in this country, mainly to perform spacific missions — polite, strict, official.

IT IS therefore to be expected that the really tough part of the autonomy talks is yet to come. That is why it now appears as if the Egyptians agree with the Israelis that the issuee of the autonomy abould not be pushed too rapidly. Both delegations are upact with the U.S. which is trying to press for more "concrete" progress in tha talks. But there is a logical axplanation for this apparent Egyptian-Israeli ''agreement'' — Sadat doce not want to awaken too many Israeli sueplcions before be has a considerable part of Sinal in his hande.

The autonomy plan has been a godsend for Sadat. When it was first suggested to him he was rather elow comprehend its far-reaching. algnificance, particularly in view of his interest in being leader of the Arah world.

At the Ismailly summit in December 1977, be wanted an Israeli declaration recognizing the principle of eelf-determination to the Palestinians. He neither wanted nor the Palestinians. He doee not represent them, he said, and could not speak in their name. But, he added, be wanted to continue leading the Arab world and Mr. Begin ehould be interested in that, too.

AT THE TIME, the prime minister emphatically rejected the idea of a declaration on Palestinian rights that would satisfy the Egyptians without involving them too closely in the implementation of those rights. The Palastinian question could then hava become a eeparate lesuc between Israei and Jordan or Israei and the Palestinians, as it should have been. Instaad, the Israeli government insisted on the autonomy plan. It did not take the Egyptians long to un-derstand that this plan provided them with a great opportunity. For, instead of chowing only aymbolic in-terest in the Palestinian problem, they were to become chief particlpants in its solution Moreover, at Camp David and in the peaca treaty, they succeeded in ueezing out of Israel a recognition of the national rights of the Palestinians, an achievement which they could not bave thought possible in Ismailiya. But most important of all is the fact that Israel was manoeuvred into a position in which the future of the whola peace treaty hecame linked to the eciution of the Palestinian problem in the West Bank.

This de facto linkage contains onc tremcodous advantage for the Egyptians, and it is amazing that the Israeli negotiating team allowed them to have it, or rather offered it to tham: The Egyptlan advantage stems from the fact that Sinai le to be completely handed over to the Egyptians three years after the ratification of the treaty, whereas the "final etatus" of Judea and Samaria is to be decided five years after the ratification of the treaty.

This means that at the final and most crucial stagee of the discussion over the eastern and most eensitive frontier of Israel, the Egyptians will be in excellent bargaining position. Having already acquired all of Sinai, they will have nothing to lose. Whether the autonomy is established or not, they will have at least two years to barass Israei diplomatically, while their army takes up position on the southern border of pre-1967

This is the scenario that emerges when one examinee the autonomy affair in the context of the future Israeli-Egyptian relations. But what about the effect on Israel itself?

ALREADY, after 12 years of Israeli rula in tha territorias, it seams that Israei's political leadership has lost sight of the country'e main problems. An immense amount of national energy is invested in devising all kinds of political exercises to keep the territories without actually lording over their inhabitants. When the autonomy plan is put into effect, after it undergoes American and Egyptian modifications, the situation will be even worse.

A greatar quantity of national energy will then be drawn out of

Israel in the most trying time in its? history in order to create and watch;

over the autonomous authority.

Israel, which is already choking with social, economic, educational, and housing problems, will have to suffer further neglect while its leaders focus their attention on the: many problems that will arise daily on both the local and international scene in relation to the autonomy. Egypt and probably other Arab states, too, will naturally meddle in the internal problems of Israel under i the pretext of the autonomy - all this without consideration of the very real possibility that the autonomous region will become a PLO base from the day of its establishment.

ALREADY, contact between the Israelis and Arabs of the territories have created a deep moral crisis in Israel, A very heavy blow was dealt to the once cherished ideal of Jewish saif-iabour. The unprecedented? dependence on Arab workers today influences the morals of the people and it may well become the Achilles heel of the economy.

Jews and Arabs have not learned to live together over the past 12 years. In the circumstances, they have been forced to exist as two separate entitics alongside each other. This enforced co-existence, in which the Israeli political leadership was unable to arrive at a cleared decision about the future of the Arab-populated areas, created a continuous feeling of imbalance and insecurity among tham.

The autonomy affair, which nobody really wants or even understands, only further confounds the bewildarment of the Palestinian Arabs and the confusion of the Israell

Sir, - Philip Gillon's articla. "Standards of Judgement" (October 24), seems to overlook the fact that, in the 30 years since be left South Africa, winds of change have awept through many parts of the world. For instance, bere in Israel, things have changed very much for the better as far as our economic atandard of living is concerned, whilst our moral standarda have slid downhill to an unpleasant degree.

During the eame period, South Africa has also made impressive economic gains, but this has been accompanied by progress on the moral front towards liberalization. Education, sport and medical services are but a few areas in which tangible, nay evên tremendous improvement has occurred. How about a little recognition of these achievements?

Sir, - It is ridiculous to assert that the token prison sentences meted out to a few aging Nazi war criminals constitute justice. The higher pur-pose of thesa trials is to reawaken the world'e conscience coocerning tha Holocaust and to prevent it from forgetting the unparalleled enormity and ferocity of the Nazi rampage.

Thia maasaga was admirably amplified by the Amarican-produced TV aeriea "Holocaust," whosa impact, however, la becoming muted by the inroads of relentiese Arab propaganda.

FEAR OF GOD To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir. - I was not aurprised to read that the police were alarmed by tha rise of juvenile crime, which is a disgrace to the Holy Land of Israel: these young criminals did not get a religious education and were not taught to fear God and obey the 10 Commandments. A yeahiva etudent, or a Beit

Ya'acov giri wiii never commit adultery, robbery or murder, because they are taught to fear God and obey tha 10 Commandments. If the Israel Government wants to prevent juvenile crime, it should see to it that its echools provide a religious education. MOISHA GOLDSTEIN

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir. - I am writing to you in the hope that some of your readers will untear once a week or more at the Malben Geriatric Centre at Dora, Netanya. It is e bome for the elderly run by the government. It bas between 700 and 800 residents and only 40 volunteers.

All that is asked is that volunteers come either mornings or afternoons, listen to the oldsters' stories and cheer tham up. More details can be obtained by calling the Social Welfare Department, 053-37141.

COURT'S DECISION

To the Editor of The Jerusolem Post

Sir, - Following the recent deciaion of the Higb Court of Justice in the Eilon Moreb case, there has been a development which ebould cause concern. Political commentatore and public personalities have attempted to portray the court's conclusion as aacrosanct. They thereby would aeek to stifle any diacusalon as to the merits of the legal arguments and the interpretation of the law by the five judges.

The supremacy of the law is a fundamental principle of democratic society. It is also true that the law is what a majority of the judgee declare it to be today — and what another majority will say tomorrow. In the United States, recent judicial decisions euch as Bakke and Weber, crucial to the fabric of American society, have been met with articlee, public discussion and even vehement criticism. This reaponse has been viewed as perfectly legitimata for indeed, that ie the eeeence of democracy, tha system the law up-court's authority without any critical stance is as much a threat to democracy as the suggestion to reject the court'a authority. ISRAEL MEDAD Jerusalem.

DON'T RETURN SINAI OILFIELDS getting ready to return the Sinai

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, - I read regular reports in your newspaper that the Syrians are getting ready to attack us. I also read repeated atatements by Butros Gbali, Egyptian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, to the effect that, should Syria be attacked, the Egyptians would come to their rescu irrespective of the peace treaty with

Sir. - As a part-year resident of Israel, I rejoice with all men of goodwill at the million-dollar park that the Mormon Church of the United Statea dedicated in Jerusaiem. As Chairman of the "Jews For Jews" Organization in the United Statee however, I must bring the Mormon Church gift into its proper perspective. Our organization seeks to expose and combat the dangerous and nefarious activities of cults and missionary groups which eeek to entrap and convert our Jewish brethren. The Mormon Church of the Latter Day Saints has never made a secret of the fact that one of its main religious tenets is to actively evangelize and energetically convert non-Mormons especially Jews. In fact, the prophet Orson Hyde, for whom the Jerusalem park is named. clearly made this conversion pledge the main part of his prophecy declaration from the Mount of Olivee

SHMUEL KATZ To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir. - Your paper is to be commended for so consistently presenting, without favour, the political and economic spectrum of opinion in Israel. However to give a forum to Shmuel Katz is going beyond impar-

Katz is a master of invective, a master of the non-sequitur (and thus a stranger to logic), a master of political reaction. Above all, be is a master of absurditiee. His essays on Gush Emunim settlemenis are exerclsee in major distortions and tortuous justifications for illegalities.

There must be proponents of reaction who can write rational essays in defence of reaction. Why not eeck these out?
